GPG Australia – Other News

Spanish Minister for Industry, Trade and Tourism officially opens Naturgy's first battery storage centre worldwide in Australia

The Spanish Minister for Industry, Trade and Tourism travelled to Australia to officially open the Queanbeyan Battery Centre. The minister was joined by the Spanish Ambassador, the Managing Director of GPG, the Director-General for International Trade and Investments, the Head of the Economic and Trade Office, the Director of the Spanish Chamber of Commerce and Trade, GPG Head of Development in Australia and other members of the GPG Australia team.

The Queanbeyan Battery Centre is the first storage facility that Naturgy will put into operation anywhere in the world. It is located in the Australian Capital Territory, close to the city of Canberra, and will perform a strategic role in support of the local distribution network.

Based on a 10 MW system of Lithium-Ion batteries and a storage capacity of 20 MWh, the Queanbeyan centre will be able to accumulate electricity from renewable sources and output it to the grid whenever it is needed at times when less electricity is being generated.

In this way, the facility will not only strengthen supply but will also contribute to promoting the energy transition in Australia, guaranteeing the presence of clean energy in the network in a continuous and stable manner. The project is tied to the construction of the Berrybank 2 wind farm, which the group will begin to operate in the coming months.
