Do you know about?

Women in Construction

While construction is still dominated by male employees it is increasingly becoming an industry that welcomes and respects women in the workplace. Renewable energy is an industry that is well advanced in employment practices that welcome all genders in any roles.

Ryan Corner wind farm and GPG Australia are examples of welcoming gender equality in the workplace. Camino Cabanillas, Civil Engineer and Ryan Corner wind farm project director, leads a team and project that includes women in the roles of community engagement, health and safety, environment, civil construction, and administration.

The renewable energy sector in Australia that includes project owners along with consultants and contractors has a high percentage of women in their workforce.
