Did You Know?

Commissioning

Commissioning is the stage where it is established that the installed plant performs as expected and complies with the performance requirements set out in the Generator Performance Standard. This process takes a number of months to complete as it includes the testing and checking of each component and system from the turbine through to the substation and the connection to the grid. The commissioning phase is directed by the requirements of the Australian Energy Market Operator (AEMO). Turbines will be seen spinning individually and in groups as the commissioning reaches hold points. Hold points are points at which an individual turbine or collector group of turbines reach the required level of operation. The commissioning phase is not to be confused with operation.
